

Painting the Autumnal Landscape Workshop with Andrew Orr

Bryan Memorial Gallery presents a 3 day workshop with artist Andrew Orr entitled Painting the Autumnal Landscape on October 10, 11 and 12, 2016 in Waterville, Vermont.

The workshop will focus on painting the landscape with an autumnal palette of depth and subtlety that is realistic and believable. Contrary to the garish bravura that is often associated with the fall season, this workshop will concentrate on the color as it is in nature in all its genuine glory and how that contrasts to the backgrounds against which the season dons its splendor.

Each day will present a new subject. The instructor will give step-by-step instructions and demonstrations on each aspect in this highly focused class. This class will focus on small studies, not on finished works and will be held entirely in the studio. The Waterville, Vermont Town Hall is an excellent venue for the student to work along side the instructor.

Artists at all levels are encouraged and while Orr will work in oil, acrylics may also be used.

The class will be from 9:00 until 4:00pm with students to arrive at 8:30 am on Monday, October 10 at Bryan Gallery in Jeffersonville. The students will all ride together to Waterville, a ten-minute car ride away, to set up and begin the class day. It is suggested that students bring their own lunches, as there are refrigerator and microwave availability but limited food options in the Waterville area.
